

The Bold Ship Phenomenal

By Sarah Johnson

A boy, a bottle, a pig and a ship... where is it going to end?

The Bold Ship Phenomenal follows the adventures of Malachi, aged 11, after he finds a mysterious ship in a bottle on the shore.

Life with Dad has been pretty sad and dull since Malachi's mother died, so he decides to keep the ship secret – a secret that gets even more exciting when he discovers that things inside the bottle can change. The ship hoists its sails and weighs anchor, sailors come and go, cargo is loaded and preparations made for a voyage.

The discovery prompts Malachi to have an adventure of his own. He stows away in the back of a truck to join a protest in a forest that he's seen on TV. But another discovery – that he is sharing his journey with pirates, both in the bottle and the truck – begins to make the trip more complicated. And that's not to mention the pig...

The Bold Ship Phenomenal

By Sarah Johnson

Sarah Johnson lives with her family at Whaingaroa, Raglan on the west coast of the North Island of New Zealand, where she works as a freelance writer and editor.

The Bold Ship Phenomenal is her third trade book for children to be published in New Zealand. Sarah won the Joy Cowley Award 2011 for her picture book, Wooden Arms (Scholastic NZ, 2012), which is also available in te reo Māori as Poupou Tauawhi (Scholastic NZ, 2012). Her previous chapter book, Ella and Ob (Scholastic NZ, 2008), was shortlisted for the 2006 Tom Fitzgibbon Award.

The Bold Ship Phenomenal was one of only two children's chapter books shortlisted for the 2013 Kobo/NZ Authors E-publishing Prize.

Pre-publication review

The Bold Ship Phenomenal, due out later this year, made me cry as I edited it. It's not a sad book though – the make-you-cry bit is just a small part. The rest is a page-turning adventure with a ship in a bottle as its star, and a strong nature theme. It's classically New Zealand, but everyone, everywhere will love it. Take my word for it!
